

2018 BUSINESS PARTNER PROGRAM

Behind every community, there is a story. In Exeter, NH, this story began in 1638 when the Reverend John Wheelwright purchased land surrounding the falls on the Squamscott and Exeter Rivers. Exeter's story took on national significance when the Declaration of Independence arrived in 1776.

The story of the American Independence Museum began later in 1721 when Nathaniel Ladd built one of the state's first brick houses. This home, which serves as the main attraction of the museum, would later serve as the state treasury and home of the state's first governor. This is, of course, just part of the story behind the American Independence Museum.

Today the museum houses over 3,000 revolutionary objects including an original copy of the Declaration of Independence, two working drafts of the U.S. Constitution and handwritten letters by George Washington. Washington even visited the museum's Folsom Tavern in 1789-- his only stop in Exeter. In addition to its vast collection, the museum is expanding and developing educational programs for all ages with more than 1,700 school age children educated in 2017 alone.
